SEASIDE SPECIAL

THE PROBLEM

They came in search of cool fresh water. The evil Polytikians needed a site, far from their home planet to process their deadly nuclear material. Within a year they had taken over the true government (deceptively appearing as the cabinet themselves) and had begun construction of their dark forbidding plant on the shores of a pleasant natural cove. Alread pumping poison into the sea the plant continued without anyone noticing – except of course the inhabitants of Rothsay Beach.

THE HERO

A diminutive beach comber, Radium Rodney stumbles upon the dreadful truth. He realises that the only way to stop the insane Polytikians is to bombard them with radioactive seaweed.

THE GAME

So tonight you're going to sneak down to the shore – now renamed Rot away Beach – in an attempt to gather enough seaweed to cart back to Downing Street. Each new wave brings more of the hot brown weed ashore. Dodging the waves you pluck (at least 10) clumps before heading for the capital.

THE NASTIES

The natural life at the waters edge has been mutated and our little knotted hankie hero will have to avoid all of them. The deadly jellyfish, crabs which like nothing better than to nip strangers on the toe and the bone-crunching clams, who are bored with the taste of jellyfish and heartily welcome a morsel of human flesh. Pools of livid green quicksand even disguise themselves after a high tide. Seagulls scream overhead while the whole area is patrolled by armed guards.

HINTS AND TIPS

Keep on the move. Never approach open clams but use the rocks as a barrier between you and jellyfish. The longer you hold on to the seaweed the higher your dosimeter climbs. Paddling in the sea is not recommended – the dosimeter goes berserk. Crabs won't kill you but there's no telling where you'll hop off to, if they nip your toes. Don't stay on the same level as the guards – they always shoot to kill. If you get into a tight corner, throw some of the seaweed you've gathered. The exit at the bottom right of Rot away Beach leads directly to Downing Street.

Here you have a chance to throw back some of their poison. Best throw technique is to hold the fire button down (this gets the clump into your hand) take aim with the joystick direction then release the fire button to fling the weed. Don't use joysticks with auto repeat firing – they use up all your seaweed before you've aimed the first shot.
